

UN day Article: refugees around the world

Refugees are people who are forced to flee their country due to civil war.

Civil war is caused by this main factor: Persecution for their political or perhaps even religious beliefs.

This past year Australia has received about 13,000 refugees mainly fleeing from the Middle East.

Australia is taking care of 0.48% of refugees, which really isn't that much compared to other countries, but transportation is a big issue when it comes to trying to flee the country.

They are all fleeing war and trying to find a better living situation for them and mostly their families.

Most refugees from the Middle East will usually flee to Europe, so it is quite rare for them to come to Australia. It is obviously not easy for a family to find a living place and the right education for their family right when they arrive here, so most refugees live in a refugee camp.

Australia only has one refugee camp, which is located in Papua-New-Guinea. The United Nation's, is responsible for making sure that the refugees are in the best position they possibly can be. Trying to keep refugees safe is hard work, because it's over millions of people trying to flee, and not every refugee camp has space for too many people, nor do they have much budget, since they do have to provide food, clothing etc.
